Attachment A: Scope of Services

Summary

HRCAC serves the Alachua County community through a variety of regular programming, and in recent years, through special pandemic-relief efforts. During the Covid-19 pandemic, it became clear that HRCAC services were also helpful to and increasingly utilized by various populations disproportionately impacted by the public health and economic crisis. Throughout the pandemic, HRCAC programming served various communities with layered and compounding barriers to health resources and economic recovery funds, including low-income workers and families, and people experiencing homelessness and housing insecurity.

Alachua County, in responding to the Covid-19 pandemic in an equitable manner, seeks to ensure that its services and resources actually reach those residents most impacted by the health and economic disaster. To that end, HRCAC programs promote access to those resources for limited English language proficient, low-income, and homeless and housing insecure residents.

HRCAC programming supports Alachua County's ability to adequately respond to Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and Executive Order 13166, which require entities receiving federal financial assistance to provide meaningful access to programs and services by eligible persons regardless of race, color, national origin, or English language proficiency.

Promoting Equitable Outcomes

The programming carried out and overseen by HRCAC supports the need to respond to Alachua County residents who speak languages other than English and may have limited English language proficiency. Data from the US Census, World Population Review.com, School Board of Alachua County, and the Rural Women's Health Project (RWHP) tells us that there are 37,719 speakers of languages other than English who reside in Alachua County, making up 14% of the population. Over half of that group are adult Spanish speakers. According to the School Board of Alachua County, there are 800 non-English speaking children in Alachua schools and more than 80 families in migrant education with monolingual Spanish or indigenous speaking parents. Significantly, the county's Combined Communications Center receives about fifty requests for the language line each month, the majority of requests coming from Spanish speakers.

As a result of the pandemic it became evident that the services provided by the HRCAC could be used to mitigate barriers to health services, affordable housing, legal assistance, and other local resources for many Alachua County residents disproportionately impacted by the Covid-19 pandemic.
