Public Notices

Public Notices are a permanent and independent record of government and court actions. These include state and local government meetings, rule making, available contracts, zoning changes, and many more, as required by law. In addition, parties to some court proceedings, such as foreclosures, probate, and estate actions are required to publish notices to ensure notification of affected parties, as well as the general public. These notices also alert business owners, large and small, to potential government contractual jobs, helping to ensure economic activity across a level playing field. Public notices have existed to ensure transparency in all levels of government since the founding of the United States.

State and local notices are published in Maine newspapers and are also recorded at mainenotices.com, where anyone can browse or search notices, and sign up to receive email alerts when relevant notices appear.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC SALE

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the Judgment of Foreclosure and Sale dated February 2, 2022, in the action entitled Nationstar Mortgage LLC d/b/a

Public Notices

as nominee for First Magnus Financial Corporation, its successors and/or assigns, dated April 27, 2007 and recorded in the Somerset County Registry of Deeds in Book 3841, Page 326, should the period of redemption have expired without redemption of the property by the mortgagors, a public sale of the property described in the mortgage will be conducted on June 21, 2022 commencing at 10:00 AM at the Office of Brock & Scott, PLLC, 190 U.S. Route One, 2nd Floor-Rear, Falmouth, ME 04105.

ATTENTION: TO BE ADMITTED TO AND PARTICIPATE AT THE FORECLOSURE SALE, ALL ATTENDEES MUST WEAR AN ACCEPTABLE FACE COVERING.

The property is located at 1556 Hill Road, Canaan, ME 04924, in Somerset County, reference as described in said mortgage.

The sale will be by public auction. All bidders for the property will be required to make a deposit of $5,000.00 in cash, certified or bank check at the time of the public sale made payable to Brock & Scott, PLLC, which deposit is non-refundable as to the highest bidder. The balance of the purchase price shall be paid within thirty (30) days of the public sale. In the event a representative of Nationstar Mortgage LLC d/b/a Mr. Cooper is not present at the time and place stated in this notice, no sale shall be deemed to have occurred and all rights to reschedule a subsequent sale are reserved.

Additional terms will be announced at the public sale.

Nationstar Mortgage LLC d/b/a Mr. Cooper by its attorneys, Brock & Scott, PLLC John Michael Ney,

Public Notices

Inc., intends to file a transfer of Site Location of Development Act (SLODA) permit application under the provisions of title 38 M.R.S. §§ 481-490, et seq. with the Maine Department of Environmental Protection. The Applicant plans to file the permit application on or about June 1, 2022.

The Applicant is proposing a transfer of its existing SLODA permit to a new owner. The existing SLODA permit covers the Eaton Mountain Solar Project, a 4.95 MWac solar project encompassing approximately 26.5 acres of land located at 327 Eaton Mountain Road, Skowhegan, ME 04976.

A request for a public hearing or a request that the Board of Environmental Protection assume jurisdiction over this application must be received by the Department, in writing, no later than 20 days after the application is found by the Department to be complete and is accepted for processing. A public hearing may or may not be held at the discretion of the Commissioner or Board of Environmental Protection. Public comment on the application will be accepted throughout the processing of the application.

A public informational meeting will be held by the Applicant to inform the public of the project. This meeting will be held online via Microsoft Teams at <https://bit.ly/3PElpeW> on Friday, June 3rd at 1:00 PM.

The application will be filed for public inspection at the Department of Environmental Protection's office in Augusta, Maine during normal working hours. A copy of the application may also be seen at the municipal offices

Public Notices

Public Notices are a permanent and independent record of government and court actions. These include state and local government meetings, rule making, available contracts, zoning changes, and many more, as required by law. In addition, parties to some court proceedings, such as foreclosures, probate, and estate actions are required to publish notices to ensure notification of affected parties, as well as the general public. These notices also alert business owners, large and small, to potential government contractual jobs, helping to ensure economic activity across a level playing field. Public notices have existed to ensure transparency in all levels of government since the founding of the United States.

State and local notices are published in Maine newspapers and are also recorded at mainenotices.com, where anyone can browse or search notices, and sign up to receive email alerts when relevant notices appear.

Knowing the importance of trailblazers

Mike Freeman
Columnist
USA TODAY

New York Yankees third baseman Josh Donaldson has apologized to Chicago’s Tim Anderson. Mostly apologized. Well, kinda did. Apology adjacent?

Donaldson was suspended for one game by MLB after he called Anderson “Jackie,” which was a referral to a 2019 quote in which Anderson compared himself to “today’s Jackie Robinson.”

Anderson believed the remark was racist. He is right to believe that.

We can analyze the hieroglyphics of Donaldson’s aPoLUgY another time. For now, there’s a lesson to be learned, one that I think many fans, some players and media, and others, have missed. It is a blunt lesson, a historic one, an old one, and it speaks to the way Black people view the trailblazers who came before us.

What Donaldson missed is how important Jackie Robinson is to Black people. He isn’t a hashtag or a patch on a uniform to most of us. Even if you never saw Robinson play, Black people know instinctively what he represents.

He is the person who absorbed the vitriol and the ugliness. He is the player who was called the N-word, had his life threatened, all so he could integrate the sport of baseball.

He is the person who endured all of that so the people who followed, mostly, wouldn’t have to.

Anderson understands this. Most Black people do.

Names like W.E.B. Du Bois, Ida B. Wells, Martin Luther King Jr., Shirley Chisholm, and so many others are part of our genome.

Why? Because they endured hell so we didn’t have to.

“One of the things that stood out to me immediately was Jackie, when he was alive, was treated awful, by a lot of people,” said Dr. Louis Moore, who teaches African American, civil rights, American and sports history at Grand Valley State University.

“A lot of people in baseball didn’t like him. Now it seems like a compliment, but it wasn’t a compliment in real time. Jackie was treated very bad by a lot of folks around baseball.”

Moore, in his interview with USA TODAY Sports’ Josh Peter, added: “To be clear, what Tim Anderson has to go through is not what Jackie Robinson had to go through. There’s a reason why Martin Luther King said he was a sit-inner before the sit-ins and a Freedom Rider before the Freedom Rides. But Jackie did that so Tim Anderson didn’t have to go through that, and I think that Tim Anderson reacts after hitting a home run at Yankee Stadium.

WENDELL CRUZ/USA TODAY SPORTS

that’s the major point that Tim Anderson was making a couple of years” ago in the Sports Illustrated story.

“Even Jackie felt like he couldn’t play a certain way,” Moore said, “and Tim understands because of everything that Jackie and others went through, he has some leeway to be able to bring change to the game this way.”

Anderson clearly knows history, and not just history, but Black history, and Black baseball history.

Donaldson clearly understands none of this.

Dr. Yohuru Williams, director of the Racial Justice Initiative based at the University of St. Thomas in Minneapolis-St. Paul, also believes Donaldson used the “Jackie” reference as an insult.

He told USA TODAY: “In a lot of ways when we think of this situation, it’s both in ways an affirmation of the mythology of Jackie Robinson and the challenge for us to kind of view Jack in a very different context. So I do think Donaldson meant it as an epithet.

“It’s a way of putting the other player down and saying he represents this more submissive view of Jackie Robinson that people have, the Jackie Robinson that didn’t fight back, the Jackie Robinson who was Branch Rickey’s boy, so on and so forth.”

Williams co-authored with Michael G. Long the forthcoming book, “Call Him Jack: The Story of Jackie Robinson, Black Freedom Fighter.” He served as chief historian and vice president for public education and outreach at the Jackie Robinson Foundation from 2012 to 2014. He believes this is a teachable moment.

It is.

The lesson is that Black people know about the people who came before us and the sacrifices they made. Those people are cherished.

It is a lesson Donaldson missed.

Rays again choose courage over capitulation

Gabe Lacques
USA TODAY

It happens every so often in the Tampa Bay Rays offices, when the thrum and grind of a 162-game season gets overtaken by external events too large to ignore, or too devastating to turn away.

As a sports franchise, the Rays are not explicitly tasked with landing on the right side of history, and they operate in an industry that prefers the milquetoast response to bold action in the face of controversy. Yet on multiple occasions, be it a nightclub slaying or marriage equality or a statue dedicated with reprehensible rhetoric, the Rays have chosen courage over capitulation.

Thursday evening, the Rays turned over their social media accounts from a celebration of baseball to a clinical recitation of gun violence statistics in the wake of last Tuesday’s mass shooting in Uvalde, Texas, that killed 19 schoolchildren and two teachers. It came after more than two days of collaborative talks that stretched from club presidents to baseball operations brass, from ownership to the clubhouse, where reliever Brooks Raley expressed his concern for his hometown of Uvalde.

It crossed franchise lines to the New York Yankees, who were in town for a key four-game series and who quickly approved of joining forces with their American League East foes.

And in the end, the heavily workshopped thread of 10 tweets, heavy on citations to refute the vitriol to come, provided a balm of sorts to those touched by gun violence, and a sense that something could be done even as an organization carried on with the largely trivial act of playing baseball.

While playing Thursday’s MLB game, the Rays and Yankees took to social media to comment on the Uvalde shooting. CHRIS O’MEARA/AP

“Far from us as a baseball team to say we have all the answers and the best ideas,” club President Brian Auld told USA TODAY Sports. “It’s a difficult line to walk. It can be a scary one. But we felt it was too important not to do so.”

A cross-section of Rays staffers collaborated to ply its audience of 655,000 Twitter followers – and 430,000 more on Instagram – with statistics conveying the effect of guns and gun violence on veterans, children, people of color and those contemplating suicide. It laid out the devastating effect assault rifles such as the AR-15 used in the Texas massacre and dozens of others.

And it backed the statistics with citations and tools to reach out.

The thread’s reach ballooned when the Yankees joined on to share it with their 3 million followers on each platform. The result, according to the Yankees social media department, was the most-liked tweet in the 13-year history of the team’s account – and the entire thread landed in their top 10 most-liked tweets ever.

While aiming to prevent tragedies such as the Uvalde shooting seems non-controversial, the Rays’ message comes in a state where the Second Amendment is viewed as sacrosanct in some quarters. Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis has expressed his determination to pass legislation allowing residents to carry concealed weapons without a permit.

Yet it’s the same state that in 2018 birthed a student movement for gun control, after 17 students and a staffer were killed at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland. For the Rays, there’s a distinction between being divisive and being right.

“In this case, children losing their lives so tragically, we think we can put politics aside and deliver the message,” said Auld. “When you think of things over the years where we’ve been the boldest, we’re not naïve to the fact it could be politically divisive. We are well aware that (backlash) is going to come. We’ve been through it a few times.”

It stretches back to March 2015, when the Rays joined the New England Patriots and San Francisco Giants in filing legal briefs with the Supreme Court in support of gay marriage, which was declared legal by the court in all 50 states three months later. In July 2017, the team supported the removal of a Confederate statue from downtown Tampa, a sculpture dedicated in 1911 with words that noted “the South detests and despises all ... who, in any manner, encourages social equality with an ignorant and inferior race.”

In June 2016, the club dedicated its Pride Night festivities to the 49 killed in the Pulse nightclub shooting in Orlando days earlier, donning Orlando Rays caps to commemorate the occasion.

“It was bigoted violence no matter what side of the aisle you’re on,” said Auld.

While the actions seem obvious to some, they nonetheless represent a systemic organizational approval that begins with owner Stuart Sternberg, who Auld says is consulted and gives approval to statements that go far outside the lines of a baseball diamond.

The tweets from behind the club logo may come from a social media staffer, but they do, in fact, carry the stamp of the team’s highest office.

“Just about every time he supports what we want to do and how we want to do it. We’re fortunate to have that at our back,” said Auld. “It might be more difficult for other (corporations) with bigger boards.

“It’s our job to run the organization and it’s our job to think how we use our platform, but he has always been an invaluable part of that process. When we know, from him, that we have his full support, that we know we’re on the right track.

“If you don’t have an owner willing to wear those consequences, including what can happen at box office, it’s difficult to maneuver around.”

Naturally, a torrent of negative responses filled the account’s replies. Yet the team also heard from fans who lost loved ones to gun violence.

“Navigating complex and nuanced discussions on Twitter is not easy,” said Auld. “When you see people being grateful, you know you went in the right direction.

“When we look back, we have nothing but pride about what we’ve done.”
